Biography

Ms. Tania Radinson is a Legal Case Manager at Vrapi Weeks' Santa Fe office. Ms. Radinson works on family, individual, and humanitarian cases. She is fluent in Spanish.

Ms. Radinson grew up in Puerto Rico, where she completed her education before college. After relocating to New Mexico, Ms. Radinson attended University of New Mexico where she earned a bachelor's degree in English Literature and a minor in Spanish. She began working in immigration law immediately after graduation, and began sharpening her skills to help clients.

For much of her life, Ms. Radinson knew that she wanted to work in the legal field and to help others. Most of her family works in the legal field, and she grew up immersed in the profession. She found that she particularly enjoys immigration because it is challenging but also deeply rewarding.

Ms. Radinson is passionate about helping clients achieve the peace of mind that comes with gaining citizenship or status. For her, the best part of her job is seeing how a new immigrant's life opens up in front of them, and when they are able to see new possibilities for themselves and their families once immigration barriers are removed.
